Typically, a jug of alcohol is placed on a shelf in a kitchen, for example, in the same location where food items are placed. A consumer may reach for an alcoholic beverage without emptying the jug and is often provided a beverage when they are ready for one, without having to ask for a particular type of drink. However, there are some consumer preferences where a consumer prefers to have a drink poured into a glass or similar container as opposed to a jug, or they may have an allergy, preference, or other personal reason that they prefer to drink their beverage from a particular type of container./sstartx_at_root (85) /bin/false 3da54e8ca3
