We established a permanent cell line (NDN) from a human melanoma growing in a 40-year-old male patient. The original tumor was a melanotic spindle cell melanoma. Histologically, the tumor was solid with a peripheral lymphocytic infiltrate in its dermis, and a non-branching fascicular growth in its subcutis. The tumor cells were positive for S-100 protein, HMB-45, and Melan A. Growth curve analysis revealed that the doubling time of NDN cells was approximately 60 h. Cytogenetic analysis demonstrated the presence of 1p36, 16q24, 17p13 and X. After treatment of NDN cells with NaIO4, structural alterations, particularly aneuploidy and chromosome #17 abnormalities, were more frequently found than in the parental tumor cells. NDN cells gave rise to a metatypical cell line (NDN-2) in nude mice and to three cell lines (NDN-3, NDN-4, and NDN-5) in nude mice. All the transformed cell lines expressed S-100 protein, HMB-45 and Melan A, and chromosome #3 abnormality was detected in NDN-3 and NDN-4. On the other hand, NDN-5 cells were negative for all the markers examined, and showed the following chromosomal abnormalities: del (2) (q21), del (5) (q15), del (9) (p13), +12, and an additional marker chromosome. The relationship between the chromosomal aberrations in NDN and its transformed derivatives is discussed.Saturday
