, EDIT: The line number in the build log says: [1/15/20,10:55:28 AM] stdout: [1/15/20,10:55:28 AM] stderr: [1/15/20,10:55:28 AM] log: [1/15/20,10:55:28 AM] A: The only way to do this (and any other anti-malware protection) is to change AutoCAD to always run before the anti-malware application. This is far harder to do in Windows. You would have to allow the auto-start of programs. This is a far harder step to take. There is now a way to add a Autorun entry to a file, so you can create a batch file to call AutoCAD so that it runs first. That is easy. However, it is still a problem. Malware is the enemy. People should not use AutoCAD in the first place. Ideally, they should not be using any graphics software.
