By reaction with TeO(3)Bu(2), a special K-type TeO(2)I(4) [K(16)] complex 1 was formed which was thermally decomposed in the presence of oxygen to give the novel iodine-containing polyoxometalates

$[\{K(I)(2)(TeO(4))(2)(I(2)TeO(3))(TeO(4))(I(2)TeO(3))\}(16)]I(2)(TeO(3))(16) \cdot TeO(3)$ (9) and $[K(I)(2)(TeO(4))(2)(I(2)TeO(3))(2)]TeO(3) \cdot 9H(2)O$ (3·9H(2)O). Both compounds were characterized by single-crystal X-ray diffraction, IR spectroscopy, and elemental analysis. 3 crystallizes in the orthorhombic space group Pna2(1) and 3·9H(2)O in the triclinic space group PT. 9 crystallizes in the monoclinic space group P2(1)/c. Compound 9 displays a zigzag Te-Te-I(2) axis, which is one of the two types of nets in the Keggin structure. 3·9H(2)O crystal

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to an organic semi-conductive material composition and, in particular, an organic semi-conductive material composition having a high electrical conductivity at a low processing temperature and a method for manufacturing the same. The material of the present invention can be advantageously used for forming a conductive film on a plastic or glass substrate, a semiconductor device and the like.

2. Description of Related Art In recent years, organic semiconductors have been attracting special attention as a material of light weight and flexibility for the next generation of electronic devices such as solar cells, organic transistors, organic light emitting diodes, and the like. Of these, research and development on organic transistors have been particularly advanced and rapid progress has been made in the field of high-performance organic transistors. Many techniques of forming an organic conductive film using an organic insulating film have been reported, and an example of such techniques is vapor deposition. In the field of vapor deposition, a single-crystalline or poly-crystalline organic thin film has been formed on a substrate such as glass and a conductive film such as an ITO (Indium Tin Oxide) layer has been formed on the thin film by vapor deposition using a sputtering technique. However, in order to form a conductive film by vapor deposition on a substrate such as plastic or glass, a target is placed at a comparatively high temperature during vapor deposition and thus the substrate is required to be heat-resistant. Furthermore, in vapor deposition, an impurity element which is essential for a conductive
