please also check out aspan's covid-19 perianesthesia nursing standards. these standards include additional guidance and recommendations for perianesthesia nurses who are caring for patients in hospitals experiencing an increase in the number of covid-19 cases and are facing an extreme/emergency surge situation. aspan has provided three important resources for perianesthesia nurses: standards of perianesthesia practice, covid-19 guidance for perianesthesia nurses and facilities, and covid-19 standards of perianesthesia nurses and facilities. the aspan standards were developed over many years to support the practice of the perianesthesia nurse. the standards are not a replacement for professional nursing practice or for your institution's own policies and procedures. the aspan standards are tools to help you manage your practice in the most effective and safest manner. the aspan standards of perianesthesia nursing practice have been the standard of practice for perianesthesia nursing for over 30 years. these standards are based on the body of knowledge developed by perianesthesia nurses in the united states. the standards are not intended to be all-inclusive, but rather to provide the framework for perianesthesia nursing practice. the standards cover practice, safety, ethics, and education. specific examples of practice are included throughout the standards. the standards also contain a compendium of resources available from aspan partner organizations for the use of perianesthesia nurses. aspan standards include a systematic review and analysis of the literature, a comprehensive review of clinical practice and regulatory requirements, and practitioner education to establish a consistent approach and a strong foundation to guide clinical practice. all aspan standards are intended to be practice standards and do not establish legal standards of practice. any reliance on such standards is for educational purposes only and should not be used as a basis for patient care or legal action. the standards are intended to provide a framework for the expanding scope of perianesthesia nursing practice and should not be interpreted as a commitment to compliance with regulatory requirements or standards. the standards are used and developed by perianesthesia nurses and nurses employed in anesthesia and perianesthesia services, regulatory agencies, and the perianesthesia community at large. the standards are intended to help perianesthesia nurses work toward achieving a consistently high standard of perianesthesia care, and each perianesthesia nurse should work toward a high level of achievement of the standards individually and as a perianesthesia team.
